The goal of Health Promotion & Disease Prevention (HPDP) is to empower you to choose healthy behaviors that keep you healthy and help reduce health risk factors. HPDP works with you to identify risk behaviors, promoting wellness, self-management, and follow through with care.

While Health Promotion addresses behavioral risk factors such as tobacco use, obesity etc., the Disease Prevention part addresses medical risks and preventive services to improve the chances for positive health outcomes. Examples include sharing information about the flu and encouraging flu vaccinations, following through on Hepatitis C screening, and encouraging regular health/dental screenings for early detection of diseases.

To encourage Veterans to choose healthy living behaviors, nine healthy living messages have been developed to reduce behavioral risk factors.

- Be Involved in Your Healthcare
- Be Tobacco Free
- Eat Wisely
- Be Physically Active
- Strive for a Healthy Weight
- Limit Alcohol
- Get Recommended Screening Tests & Immunizations
- Manage Stress
- Be Safe

Our clinical staff can help you achieve a healthier lifestyle by providing you the tools needed within the VA and your local community, such as health education, clinical services, health behavior coaching and continued support to enhance self-management of your health condition.

Some services need a clinical referral, while other services are self-referral (examples below).

Health Promotion & Disease Prevention share many goals and there is considerable overlap between the two.

In summary - our team is engaged to empower you and to equip you to take charge of your whole health and promote follow through of your goals. Follow through and ensuring that you attend your appointments and see your doctor on a regular basis is an important part of HPDP. We are here to help, but ultimately, the responsibility to live a healthier lifestyle lies with you.
Whole Health - What Matters Most to You?

Whole Health Care is personalized care to empower you to take charge of your well-being and affirms the importance of the relationship between you and your healthcare team. The personalized care focuses on questions that matter to you to get you started (such as what do you need, what activities would you like?), followed by goal planning (what specific behaviors can you commit to doing, how often, & when?), and then continues to the goal follow-up (what is helping you to be successful?).

What encouraged you to start the Whole Health Initiative Program?
My therapist introduced me to meditation, Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT) and Dialectical Behavioral Therapy (DBT) which allowed me to start to change my ways of thinking as well as learn methods that would allow me to control my emotions. I have been able to address the trauma in my life and I have noticed my self-care and self-love is starting to return.

What do you like about the Whole Health Initiative Program?
I enjoy yoga, tai-chi and meditation, as well as learning the different practices that help me improve my mind and help me reach my goals. The whole point of the Whole Health Initiative model is to have the mind and body get in tune with one another. I am now better focused and able to control my emotions.

What would you tell the Veteran population to encourage others to participate in the Whole Health Initiative?
My advice to Veterans is not to give up, and to give it a chance. I didn’t think that there was anything that could help me and I tried it and it really worked for me. Whatever we have inside that is going on in our lives, this program gives us the opportunity to change those behaviors. I would encourage all Veterans to get involved in all the activities that you can while you are here at the Coatesville VAMC.
